STATINTL

Dear Jack,

STATINTL

I received your letter dated 8 April when I got home from work last night. Let me know if you do not get a proper reaction from the Navy in [] I will either call the Bureau before I leave here or I'll stop by at

STATINTL

[] and get them to send a cable off to the Bureau. I am optimistic that the orders will be forthcoming with pay, but the process in getting this training duty is certainly tortuous.

STATINTL

By now you have received official word about the visit and I appreciate that you have the matter in hand and can foresee no great problems. Bud's away for a couple of days, but I will try and get an answer a.s.a.p. on whether he will settle for the [] because the apartment sounds like it is situated rather inconveniently. I would scrap the hotel idea and, if you will, keep the other possibilities open until I get final word. Meanwhile, your assumption is correct and I will be happy with a nice room in the [] as long as it's nice. Last time I roomed with Carl in a suite, but I recall passing some seamy portions of that little complex.

STATINTL

You have a very good suggestion for that alternative to shopping, and a trip up [] for a couple of hours might be quite agreeable to Bud. I am not sure what Nancy has in mind in the way of shopping, but perhaps it could be put off to [] or some other place.

I have noted the complication about the conference that will be taking place there about that time and will offer some comments on this after I talk with Bud about the problem generally. I will get a letter off to you over the weekend, but since we leave on Wednesday, perhaps you might send a note to me at the during the following week.

I enjoyed your closing remark and we look forward to our visit to see you and your family and your colleagues.

Sincerely,
